(Mike Chrisman is not on vacation, but we're running a version of a previous column anyway, because it concerns a matter of utmost national importance.)

Well, we're almost done with 1993, and that can only mean one thing: it's time to name the next decade. No, I don't mean the nineties, dummy; that's this decade. And they already have a name: The Nineties. I mean the next decade—those years with the zeroes in them. The ones hardly any of us had a look at last time around. The ones your Uncle Buster gets laughs with when he scrunches overlike an old geezer and says, "I remember back in aught-six, sonny...." That's how you spell it, you know: "Aught." I looked it up. You probably always thought Uncle Buster was saying "ought," which shows you don't read the dictionary nearly enough, and your literate friends probably think you're a loser.

Frankly, the fact that I have to come to you with this important spelling information just confirms my low opinion of every year since 1969. So if you can tear yourself away from the TV for five minutes, maybe you can redeem yourself and make that contribution to civilization you've always fantasized about. Here's how. You can play "Name That Decade," and become one of a small group of people (Joan of Arc, Catherine of Aragon, Oprah of Chicago) who has changed the course of history.

To play "Name That Decade," simply think up an awesome name that the next decade will go by for the remainder of recorded time. I offer the following as examples:

The Pre-Teens. The perfect name for something that comes before (or "pre-") the teens. Examples of this usage of "pre-" in everyday language include the common words "pre-mature," meaning "before you're mature;" "pre-monition," meaning "before you have a monition," and "pre-vent," meaning "before you install a bathroom fan."

The Post-Nineties. Admittedly, a variation on "Pre-Teens". This term would adequately describe something that stands solidly, like a post, so the nineties couldn't get loose and wreak havoc in the next decade, like the sixties did with the seventies until Nixon was re-elected.

The Nothings. Or (for the benefit of our Hispanic friends) The Nadas. People would have a lot of fun with this one. They'd make clever variations on the Nothing theme: The Zips, The Goose-Eggs, The Shut-Outs, etc. You (in the role of your beloved Uncle Buster) would scrunch overlike an old geezer and tell your nieces and nephews, "I remember back in zilch-six, sonny...."

The Ohs. Or (in hip, illiterate, advertising lingo) The Oze. This is my personal favorite, and I really hope it catches on in the future. Imagine the opportunities to use "oze" in normal conversation:

"Hey, diya see that show on holovision last night?"

"Huh-uh. What about?"

"Nudity in the oze — first the president, now the Pope."

"Thermal, man; I'm sure psyched I live in the oze; Grandma says it's like the sixties."

See how easy it is to play "Name That Decade?" Now just send your personal suggestion to me, in care of this newspaper, and then wait until our distinguished panel of judges gets out of jail and awards you the prize. Just kidding about our judges. They're not distinguished at all. The winner (or winners, in the event the judges kill each other) will receive many valuable rewards, including a large footnote in every history book on the planet. Plus, your literate friends might quit thinking you're such a loser.

THIS MODERN WORLD

TOM TOMORROW © 8-3-93

THERE'S AN OLD SAYING THAT "EVERYONE WANTS TO GO TO HEAVEN, BUT NO ONE WANTS TO DIE"... WHICH PRETTY WELL SUMS UP HOW AMERICANS FEEL ABOUT THE DEFICIT...

SOMETHING HAS TO BE DONE ABOUT THIS DEFICIT MESS...

--AS LONG AS I DON'T HAVE TO PAY FOR IT, THAT IS!

WEALTHY AMERICANS HAVE BEEN SQUEALING LIKE STUCK PIGS OVER A MARGINAL RISE IN THEIR TAX RATES... POINTING TO THE ALLEGED CREATION OF 18 MILLION NEW JOBS DURING THE REAGAN/BUSH YEARS AS PROOF OF THE NEED TO LOWER UPPER-INCOME TAXES...

THE NUMBERS SPEAK FOR THEMSELVES! A RISING TIDE LIFTS ALL YACHTS--ER--HEH, HEH--I MEAN, BOATS!

BIG OIL WEASELED OUT OF THE B.T.U. TAX BY ARGUING THAT THE COST WOULD BE PAID INDIRECTLY BY CONSUMERS...

--AND SINCE WE OBVIOUSLY CAN'T HAVE THAT--

--WE'RE GOING TO IMPOSE A GAS TAX INSTEAD-- WHICH WILL BE PAID DIRECTLY BY CONSUMERS!

WAIT A MINUTE...

THE PROBLEM IS THAT MANY OF THESE JOBS WERE "CREATED" BY DIVIDING ONE EXISTING FULL-TIME JOB WITH BENEFITS INTO SEVERAL PART-TIME JOBS WITHOUT BENEFITS... INCREASING CORPORATE PROFITS AT THE EXPENSE OF AN ALREADY-OVERBURDENED HEALTH CARE SYSTEM... WHICH, OF COURSE, LEADS US TO OUR NEXT CRISIS...

SOMETHING HAS TO BE DONE ABOUT THIS HEALTH CARE MESS--

--AS LONG AS I DON'T HAVE TO PAY FOR IT, THAT IS!

"THIS MODERN WORLD" HAS BEEN GETTING A LOT OF MAIL LATELY FROM CONSERVATIVES WHO SEEM TO BE ANGRY AT US FOR THINGS BILL CLINTON HAS DONE... THEY OFTEN LUMP US INTO THE AMORPHOUS CATEGORY OF "YOU LIBERALS," WHICH APPARENTLY ENCOMPASSES ANYONE TO THE LEFT OF, SAY, BOB DOLE...

SPARKY, YOU'RE DOING A GREAT JOB SPREADING OUR RADICAL LEFT-WING PROPAGANDA!

THANKS BILL! LISTEN, I'VE GOT TO RUN-- I'M MEETING LLOYD BENTSEN TO DISCUSS THE OVERTHROW OF CAPITALISM!

IN FACT, WE HAVE TO ADMIT--IT'S PRETTY DARNED UNFAIR THAT THE NATION'S CORPORATE-OWNED MEDIA ARE SO THOROUGHLY DOMINATED BY LEFT-WING VOICES SUCH AS OURS...

WHY--CONSERVATIVES CAN BARELY GET A WORD IN EDGEWISE!

OF COURSE, WE CAN'T BLAME READERS OF DIFFERING POLITICAL PERSUASIONS FOR FEELING THREATENED BY THIS CARTOON... SOMETIMES WE OURSELVES ARE A LITTLE OVERWHELMED BY THE AWESOME POWER WE WIELD...

BAD NEWS, SIR-- TOM TOMORROW HAS MADE OUR CORPORATION THE TARGET OF ONE OF HIS BITINGLY CLEVER CARTOONS!

DAMN! WE MIGHT AS WELL GIVE UP NOW-- WE DON'T STAND A CHANCE AGAINST HIS CAUSTIC WIT!

YES, IT'S CERTAINLY A ONE-SIDED DEBATE... WHICH IS WHY, AS A PUBLIC SERVICE TO OUR LONG-SUFFERING CONSERVATIVE READERS, WE'RE HAPPY TO PRESENT THE FOLLOWING READY-TO-MAIL COUPON--DENOUNCING THIS VERY CARTOON...

JOE BOB BRIGGS

Did you know that the Stockbridge-Munsee Band of the Mohican Indian tribe has its own gambling casino in Bowler, Wisconsin?

In fact, is there any Indian tribe left in the whole country that does not have a gambling casino? Every once in a while, somebody tries to stop the Indians from building a bingo hall or a poker parlor or a video-poke saloon and gift shop, and they get furious. They don't get mad, like, "We've got to defeat this stupid zoning ordinance." They get mad like "You're destroying our Indian heritage and violating all our ancient treaties."

The Winnebago got real upset this year because the state of Minnesota denied them a permit to build a "gaming facility" at that tourist mecca — De Jope, Minnesota. And so the "chairperson" of the tribe — they don't even have chiefs any more — made a statement to the press.

"We're making progress," she said. "This time they didn't take our land. They just won't let us use it." And then she talked about all the battles the Winnebago had fought against the white man in the past, like this was just one more stop on the Trail of Tears.

Did I miss something here? When did all the Indians decide that an essential part of their culture was the right to sell slot machine tokens to rummies based in from Akron?

I thought the whole idea of the reservation was so they could preserve their way of life, without the white man hanging around. But these Indians not only want the white man to come to the casino. Judging by the kind of odds they're offering, they want the stupidest white man to come visit.

A big-deal progressive slot payoff at the Ojibwa Casino Resort in Baraga, Michigan, is something like thirty or forty thousand. They used to have better payoffs at the illegal casino in Hot Springs, Arkansas.

Anyhow, my question is this. How did all the Indians decide to do this at once? Did they have secret meetings at Little Big Horn where they said, "Okay, you sell blackjack to the Indian farmers — I'll take craps in Iowa"? Or, like most Indian things, maybe it was purely spiritual. Maybe the Great Spirit of the West Wind spoke to the Sioux chieftains and said, "Build huge buffet-style cafeterias right next to the baccarat room."

And one more question. How come the manager of the casino never looks like he's really an Indian? It's always one of those guys who looks like he never shaves or takes a bath, but he's wearing a thousand-dollar suit anyway.

When the Pilgrims landed, wasn't the idea that the white people destroyed the Indians' innocence? Wasn't the Indian supposed to be the guy who didn't drink or gamble till white people corrupted him?

What kind of Indians are these anyhow?

EARTHWEEK: A DIARY OF THE PLANET

World Floods

Ukrainian officials have appealed for international help as severe floods submerged part of the northern region of Rivne. Rain has not stopped for a month and 740,000 acres of land have been flooded.

A second week of flooding swept the Chinese provinces of Hunan, Sichuan, and Jiangsu and hundreds of people have died.

More than 25 people were killed when torrential downpours unleashed floods and landslides on the Japanese islands of Kyushu and Shikoku. Scores of homes were swept away as more than 25 inches of rain fell in three days.

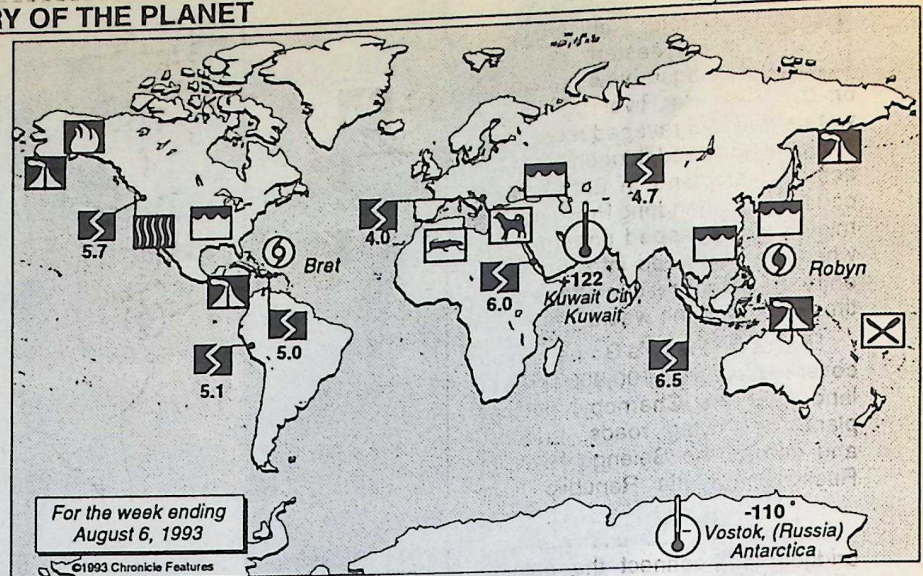

In the United States, dynamiters blew up levees to save the city of Prairie du Rocher, Ill., from the raging Mississippi River. National Guardsmen and police along the Missouri River, near Hardin, Mo., worked feverishly to retrieve dozens of corpses dislodged from flooded cemeteries along the river. Many of the displaced bodies won't be retrieved until the floods end. "You can see them floating out in the open water. It's not a pretty sight," said Sheriff Joe Arnold.

African Locusts

Locusts swarming across Africa from the Red Sea will reach southern Algeria by the end of the month. The Algerian Agriculture Ministry assembled teams of locust fighters equipped with helicopters and 500,000 gallons of pesticide to control the pests.

Heat Wave

A heat wave baked the U.S. West Coast, triggering a rash of fires throughout California. The temperature rose to 100 degrees Fahrenheit in San Francisco. Oregon farmers are attempting to harvest their $200 million grass-seed crop before it is destroyed by the heat wave.

For the week ending August 6, 1993

Food Catastrophe

Leaf blight has struck the Samoan taro crop and there are fears that the entire crop will be wiped out. The blight attacks the taro leaves and causes the plant to ripen early. Taro, a root crop, is a major part of most Samoans' daily diet. In a television address Prime Minister Tofilau Eti Alesana announced the formation of an emergency task force to fight the leaf blight crisis.

Dead Sea Quakes

An earthquake centered in the Red Sea shook buildings in Israel, Egypt, and Jordan. The main shock was followed by more than 30 aftershocks. Tens of thousands of people in Cairo panicked and ran into the streets after the main shock. Earth movements were also recorded in Sumatra, Romania, Puerto Rico, Peru, Lake Baikal in Russia, and Vancouver, Canada.

Ring of Fire

Sequim Volcano in Alaska's Aleutian Island chain erupted, with an ash cloud which rose to 4,000 feet. The Veniaminov volcano in Alaska also showed activity, releasing a 1,000-foot plume of ash and smoke.

Across the Bering Strait in Russia, the Klyuchevskoy volcano on the Kamchatka Peninsula erupted, sending gas and steam 37 miles to the north. Russian scientists are also watching the nearby Shiveluch volcano that has recently registered increased seismic activity.

Three Guatemalan villages are threatened by lava flows from the Pacaya volcano, and scientists in Guatemala City expect a major eruption soon. The village of El Caracol, two miles away, is in imminent danger, as are the communities of El Rodeo and El Patrocinio. Mt. Pinatubo in the Philippines also threw volcanic ash over towns in Luzon this week.

Raging Fires

More than 80 fires are burning in the state of Alaska. The largest fire is spreading along the Yukon River near Dalton, and covers more than 36,000 acres of wilderness. Most of the fires are monitored by officials with no attempt to put them out.

Canine Cuisine

Animal-rights groups in Israel became outraged by an entrepreneur's plans to export dogs to the Philippines, where canines are considered a delicacy. Solo Leibowitz defended his plan in the Jerusalem Post, claiming that "instead of killing stray dogs it would be humanitarian to fly them to Asia to feed starving people." He expects the first shipment to leave Israel in a few days. Israel has no laws banning such exports.

New Supermarket Item: Live War-Scarred Infants!

A San Francisco man, traumatized by an unusual supermarket display, wandered in a daze through active subway tunnels for several hours.

The man was in the poultry section of the Safeway supermarket when he noticed live babies packed in cellophane among the chickens. Many bore wounds and severe burns from the aerial bombardment of Iraq.

Unsure if the babies were real, the man picked up a wooden drumstick and tapped one lightly on the abdomen.

"When he saw it was alive, he just stood there in a state of shock drumming on its belly," said a witness.

Safeway employees rushed to the poultry section and ejected the terrified man from the store.

Hours later the same man was spotted wandering through a Brooklyn subway tunnel. Witnesses say the man, still dazed from his experience at the Safeway, got off a train between stations and continued his journey on foot. He was spotted by the crew of a single-car train which was being used as a trainer for novice subway motormen.

By the time the trainees radioed in for assistance, the man had already reached his destination and left the subway.

Whether the babies in the Safeway were intended as a pro- or anti-war statement remains unclear. The Motormen's Training Union had no comment on the incident.

Dynamic Duo Make Useless Appearance

Batman and Robin appeared at the Roman Coliseum after financial criminal Michael Milken, who had been sentenced to mortal combat against a slew of gladiators, broke his bonds and rose screaming into the air.

The Dynamic Duo were dressed in costumes from their 1960s television show and appeared no more aged or paunchy than they did at the time the show was produced.

Fierce Floods

 Desperate officials in China's eastern province of Jiangsu blew up a dam on the Xinyi He River to release waters that had ravaged more than 1,000 villages and flooded 329,000 acres of cropland in 24 Chinese counties. In Shandong Province, 59 miners were trapped underground when water poured into the mine entrance. Major rescue efforts continued through the week.

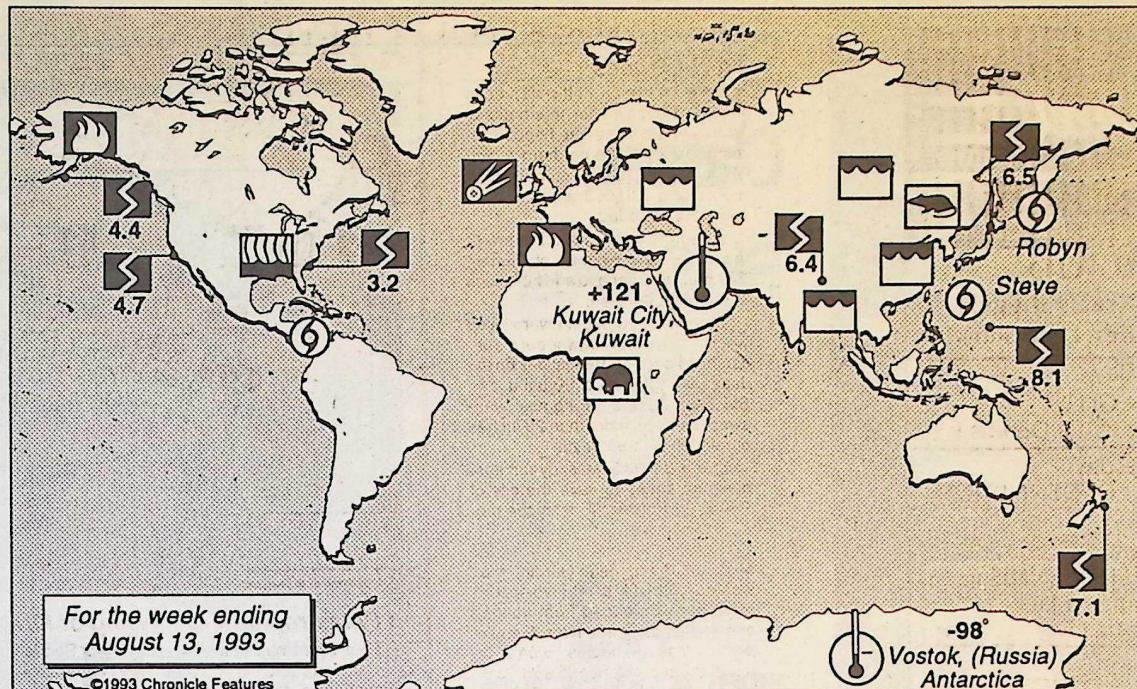

Floods in Russia's Gomel region covered more than 100,000 acres of land near the Chernobyl nuclear plant, destroying roads, bridges, and dams. The Selenga River in Russia's Buryatia Republic near Mongolia overflowed, covering dozens of villages and wrecking bridges that connect the capital, Ulan-Ude, with the outside world.

Monsoon floods and landslides swept away several villages in India and Nepal. Floodwaters damaged Nepal's largest hydroelectric project, reducing the country's electrical supply by one third.

Great Earthquake

 One of the strongest earthquakes this century rocked the U.S. Pacific island of Guam but caused no deaths. The magnitude 8.1 quake damaged tourist hotels, wrecked bridges, and tossed cars into rivers. Damage forced the Joint Typhoon Warning Center to close while monitoring typhoon Steve, which struck Guam during the tremor.

New Zealand was jolted by two earthquakes that broke water mains, damaged roads and caused power outages in the city of Gisborne. There were no fatalities. Six people were killed in Nepal by two earthquakes centered in Afghanistan and felt in Russia, Pakistan, and India. Earth movements also struck San Francisco, western South Carolina, Alaska, and Japan.

Toxic Wash

 Receding waters of the Mississippi River and its tributaries may contain a "witch's brew" of toxics released by munition dumps, gasoline stations, industrial concerns, and sewage treatment plants. The U.S. Environmental Protection Agency identified 27 flooded hazardous material sites. In Chesterfield, Mo., dead fish and other waste lying in the streets caused a stench that could be smelled for several miles.

Killer Storms

 Tropical storm Bret struck Venezuela, killing 150 people, then causing floods in Nicaragua and Costa Rica. Typhoon Robyn triggered floods and landslides in Japan before moving on to South Korea, where 50,000 ships and boats pulled into port. Robyn then swept north and caused flooding in Vladivostok where 8 inches of rain fell in two days.

Forest Fires

 Bombs left over from the Spanish Civil War detonated as a forest fire burned near Valencia on Spain's east coast. Another blaze in the mountains near Granada threatened the habitat of a rare mountain goat. Other fires burned in the province of Tarragona, southern France, the French Riviera, the island of Corsica, and Italy. A forest fire in Alaska has covered more than 158,000 acres near the community of Circle.

Elephant Escape

 Up to 100 elephants joined thousands of refugees fleeing into Uganda from southern Sudan to escape the civil war. Game wardens guided the herd to safety in Murchison National Park. Elephants also have migrated to escape sporadic ethnic fighting and civil war in Zaire.

Meteor Showers

 Poor weather cheated the Netherlands, Ireland, and Britain of a clear view of the Perseid meteor shower. Astronomer and broadcaster Patrick Moore said from his home south of London, "I can't see a thing. It's most annoying. I've all my equipment with me here, but it's very cloudy."

Mass Mouse Suicide

 Carcasses of 300,000 mice of a species locally known as "big-eyed devils" were found dead in the waters and on the shore of a lake in China's Fuhai County. A team from the local locust and mouse disaster forecasting station saw large groups of mice plunging into rivers and lakes but could not explain the bizarre behavior. Alarmed authorities ordered an immediate investigation.

When my girlfriend and I go out to get pizza, I pay for it. If I didn't we couldn't go out very much. I make more money than she does.

Sometimes she says I pay for everything so that I can kiss her at the end of the night. But that's not why I do it. Some guys think that way, but I don't.

When I kiss her something takes over my body. She has neat lips.

I don't know why I make more money than she does. She's as smart as meeven smarter than me in some ways.

It's all confusing.

All I really do know is since last February 1st she now owes me $123.48 for pizzas and drinks.

ALL RIGHT, HERE'S THE PLAN! WE MAKE UP A FAKE CODE WITH FAKE INSTRUCTIONS AND SEE THAT IT "ACCIDENTALLY" FALLS INTO SUSIE'S HANDS!

SHE DECODES THE MESSAGE, WHICH SAYS WE DON'T WANT HER TO GO BEHIND OUR HOUSE. NATURALLY, SHE'LL GO THERE, AND WE'LL BE WAITING, READY TO SOAK HER WITH WATER BALLOONS!

WHY DON'T WE JUST HIT HER WITH WATER BALLOONS RIGHT NOW, WHERE SHE'S SITTING?

YOU'RE A GOOD OFFICER, HOBBS, BUT LET'S FACE IT, YOU DON'T HAVE AN EXECUTIVE MIND.

NOW THIS IS SUPPOSED TO LOOK LIKE A CODED MESSAGE FROM ME TO YOU, BUT WE'LL LEAVE IT FOR SUSIE TO FIND.

OBVIOUSLY, THE CODE WILL HAVE TO BE EASY TO BREAK, SO SHE CAN READ THE DISINFORMATION WE'RE GIVING HER.

HOW ABOUT IF WE WRITE BACKWARDS?

DEAR HOBBS?

humor me

by Izzy Gesell

(While Izzy is on vacation, we are reprinting some of his favorite columns)

I'm in a subway car under Washington, DC, traveling from National Airport toward Union Station. Part of the fun of riding public transportation lies in playing "Create A Life," the game whose object is to scrutinize, evaluate and dismiss any person whom fate brings into your line of sight. Begin by assuming you are looking through a one way mirror, like a witness at a police lineup. Making eye contact with your subject means you're out and the round is over.

Contestant number one is a male/female tandem who board the train together. The subway car is rush-hour crowded so they stand face-to-face, left hands grasping the pole, choose-up style. He is impeccably dressed, a mannequin with a working cardiovascular system. His tassled loafers are shiny enough to peek all the way up the Statue of Liberty's dress, you could clip coupons with the crease in his trousers and the ruddy glow emanating from his face indicates he has his zits professionally popped. An unscuffed leather briefcase rests gently at his feet.

On his head is perched a bad, no make that EXTREMELY bad, toupee. This is the stimulus Pavlov used to elicit the response, "Doesn't this guy realize how bad that thing looks?" To an observer, seeing that wig is akin to knowing a secret that can't be told without getting yourself in trouble. It is juicy information that is unusable.

He is talking to the woman and he is driving the conversation. "Blah blah blah, meeting I went to, blah blah blah report I read, blah blah blah committee I chaired." Lost in a kind of bureaucratic reverie that allows him to feel important, he is some sort of Bill Murray character gone to Washington.

His companion is listening to this blusterer, obviously having a hard time keeping her eyes from scaling his face and peeking at the unfortunate wig. She knows she dare not glance above his chin because a bad toupee acts like a magnet. If she went any higher than his mouth she would end up staring at the monstrosity. And that would blow the whole charade. She wears a look on her face that she might use if she were making love to someone and didn't want to laugh out loud. Perhaps, she is thinking baseball statistics.

Sitting diagonally across from me, on the far side of the contestants, is a young woman in her 20's. I see her glance at the toupee, check her fingernails and then, magnetically bewitched, look again and again at the Hair Club for Men reject that is the object of both her and my scorn and amusement. Each time she looks at the piece, a small smile slides across her face, disappearing before it gets too wide and out of control.

I am in total sync with this stranger. She and I are having the same experience at the very same time. Neither of us can stop looking and laughing silently. I'm now trying to avoid the guy's gaze and hers, mostly his. Finally, we lock into each other's eyes and, after a nanosecond of connection, acknowledge our shared moment by smiling at each other. Then we each politely bow our heads and pretend to be interested in the fabric of our coats.

Reflected in this person are my deepest thoughts and reactions to the toupee. Without sharing a word, I have found a fellow conspirator and colleague, someone who read my mind as clearly as if there was a TelePrompTer in my forehead. Everyone else on the Metro is making believe they either don't see the guy or else find it quite normal. My co-conspirator and I are the ones who have admitted reality and the shared smilage bonds us together like psychic crazy glue. For a split second we are lovers; vulnerable, truthful, united against the world. Laughter as the ultimate safe sex of the 90's. Ah, my dear, whoever you are. We will always have Washington.
